

UNDER DECK OASIS

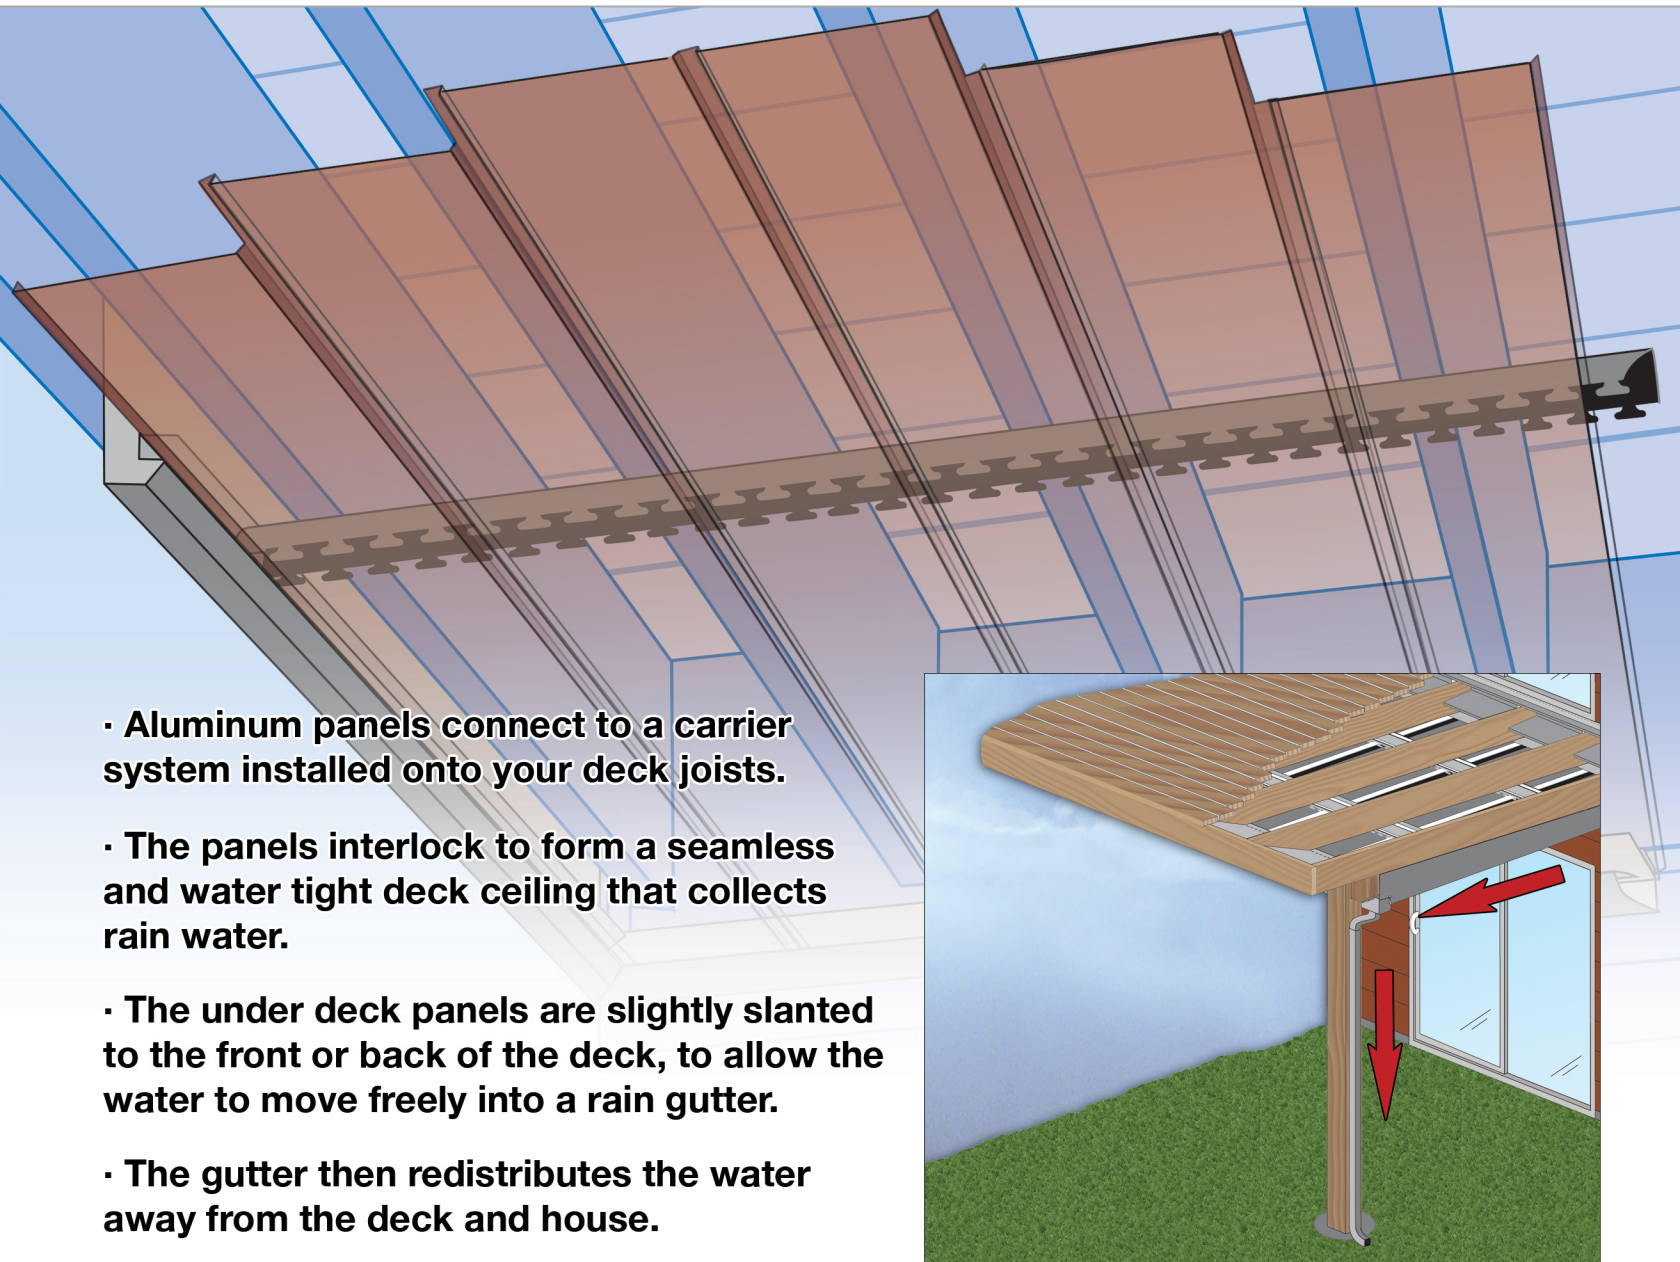

PRODUCT GUIDE

CREATE A BEAUTIFUL NEW OUTDOOR LIVING SPACE

Our finished ceiling system is the most effective way to channel water away from your deck, creating a stunning area for relaxing and entertaining.

Under Deck Oasis Gives Your Home More Space by Creating a Ceiling Under Your Deck.

- Aluminum panels connect to a carrier system installed onto your deck joists.
- The panels interlock to form a seamless and water tight deck ceiling that collects rain water.
- The under deck panels are slightly slanted to the front or back of the deck, to allow the water to move freely into a rain gutter.
- The gutter then redistributes the water away from the deck and house.

How Much Clearance is Needed Beneath the Deck?

At the high end, the under deck ceiling system hangs approx. 2 inches below the deck beam level. From there, the slope drops 1/8" for every foot.

Almost without exception, there has been plenty of clearance room for the system to function properly. Very rarely there can be issues with doors not being able to open properly. However, using some simple flashing we have been able to overcome even this rare obstacle.

Creating a New Living Space

As you know, the functionality of Under Deck Oasis deck ceiling keeps rain water from coming through your second story deck, which opens up a world of new possibilities. The deck ceiling system also gives the area a finished appearance making it ready for all sorts of daily activities and special occasions.

Most obviously, Under Deck Oasis keeps expensive outdoor patio furniture safe and dry so it can be left out permanently (or at least most of the time), allowing you to have a relaxing retreat that you will utilize much more frequently. So stop worrying about having to drag cushions in and out every time you want to sit outside for a minute.

Outdoor Kitchen and Year-round Grilling

Have you ever had to scrape snow and ice off your grill? Anyone who steps up to the grill in mid-winter knows it can be a royal pain. It can be difficult to get the grill lit, especially if you are using charcoal.

Here is the thing... grilling is a passion, so if your grill is outside under a second story deck, having an aluminum ceiling over head can really make all the difference. Grilling in the rain or snow is no longer an issue, and you won't need to store your expensive grill during the winter months. And how about the holidays? Be the holiday hero and grill some ribs, or maybe cook that turkey 'Beer Can Style' and really impress the in-laws.

Hot Tub Area

A great reason (we think, anyway!) for maximizing and beautifying the space under your second story deck, is the installation of that glorious modern marvel... the hot tub!

It doesn't take an advanced degree to know that hot tubs are some of the most fun, relaxing, and downright enjoyable escape devices in our modern rat-race world. Spend more quality time with the kids, or more romantic quality time with your spouse.

Utilizing the Under Deck Oasis system gives you the freedom to put your hot tub in a very desirable location.

Choosing the Best Color for Your Under Deck System

An existing deck structure is not a blank canvas, and you need to consider the color and stain of your deck. You also need to be aware of your siding color, and any stone or brick work under and near the deck. Below are some examples:

Keeping it clean... a great way to get a good look is by matching under deck panels with preexisting trim and deck posts. In this examples the posts were wrapped in white so white under deck panels were used.

Matching 'like' with 'like'... you can try matching the panel colors to the preexisting deck wood. In this case, the homeowner used our Medium Teak to match the color of this wood structure.

Going BOLD... In some cases opposites attract. In this example the owner went with a Straight Grain Karri against the brilliant green and bright white trim.

Aluminum VS Vinyl

Vinyl systems lack the rigidity needed for a stable under deck water collection system. Snow, ice, water, and temperature fluctuations will all take their toll on the system within a few years, if not sooner. Even the vibration from walking on the deck above can cause a vinyl system to loosen and distort. Vinyl under deck systems are not great if you are looking for a long term solution to your deck drainage needs.

We use an aluminum alloy which doesn't expand or contract with changing temperatures, like vinyl does. Combined with our professional under deck installation, this means that our leak-proof under deck cover won't develop cracks, gaps, or any other flaws regardless of temperature fluctuations.

Lights, Fans & Accessories

While performing your under deck ceiling installation we are able to provide the necessary waterproofing for any lights or fans that you desire to have installed. In order for these accessories to be completely waterproofed, they must be surface mountable. This means that they can connect to a light box, and are not recessed. We can also allow for porch swings and other accessories.

Be sure to let your Under Deck Oasis representative know about your interest in light and fans so we can properly design the system for you.

How Much Does the Under Deck Oasis Product Cost?

There are many, many factors that determine the cost of the Under Deck Ceiling. Prices are different depending on the way you purchase, the finish, deck size, location, cantilever areas, ceiling fans and other accessories, irregular shaped decks, location, and more. For a realistic accurate, please provide us with photos and a drawing of your deck.

How Will the Under Deck Oasis Stand Up To Snow and Winds?

Under Deck Oasis was designed in Michigan for Michigan winters, and is engineered with withstand heavy snow and drastic freeze / thaw cycles.

Unless winds reach hurricane force, the Under Deck Oasis will not be adversely affected by wind. The reason for this is the panels are securely locked into the carrier system. Our unique carrier design captures the panel on both the top and the bottom, allowing the panels to fit in the teeth with little excess room for movement.
